9 Whereas, the vast majority of undergraduate students used the Common Application to apply for
10 admission to Cornell University;

11
12 Whereas, the Common Application asks applicants for demographic information, such as race,
13 ethnicity, religion, and sex;

14
15 Whereas, the Common Application does not ask applicants for information relating to sexual 16 orientation, gender identity and/or expression;

17
18 Whereas, not all applicants identify with their legal sex or their assumed or presumed sex assigned
19 at birth, and not all applicants identify within the confines of the gender binary;

20
21 Whereas, Cornell strives to be an inclusive university, regardless of sexual orientation, gender
22 identity and/or expression;

23
24 Whereas, many other universities, including Columbia University, Dartmouth College, and the 25 University of Pennsylvania, collect information regarding an applicant's gender identity and/or 26 expression, preferred pronouns, and/or sexual orientation/identity;

27
28 Whereas, queer-identifying students, especially trans* students and queer students of color, and 29 notably trans* students of color, often face social and academic exclusion in virtually all realms of 30 life at Cornell University, according to the 2014 Hurtado Report;

31
32 Whereas, the LGBT Resource Center cannot reach out to LGBTQ+ students until after they arrive
33 to campus and seek out the LGBT Resource Center themselves;

34
35 Whereas, both Cornell University and the LGBT Resource Center are currently unable to gauge
36 important demographic information for queer students, such as persistence and retention rates;

37
38 Whereas, as highlighted in the Association of American Universities' 2015 report on Cornell
39 University, 16% of transgender, genderqueer, and gender non-conforming students had experienced
40 nonconsensual sexual conduct, compared to 23% of women and 6% of men;

41
42 Whereas, according to the AAU 2015 report, 29% of non-heterosexual females and 11% of non-
43 heterosexual males reported experiencing non-consensual sexual conduct, compared to 22% and 5%
44 of their heterosexual counterparts respectively;

45

46 Whereas, according to the 2014 Hurtado Report, many queer students find it difficult to find queer
47 resources on campus, including finding the LGBT Resource Center itself;
48

49 Be it therefore resolved, that the Cornell administration add an optional question on the Cornell
50 University supplement of the Common Application that asks for the applicant's gender identity,
51 using either a blank, fill-in box or a drop-down with the following options:

- 52 • Agender
- 53 • Androgyne
- 54 • Demigender
- 55 • Genderqueer or gender fluid
- 56 • (Cis) Man
- 57 • Questioning or unsure
- 58 • Trans man
- 59 • Trans woman
- 60 • (Cis) Woman
- 61 • An identity not listed
- 62 • Prefer not to disclose

63
64 Be it further resolved, that the Cornell administration add an optional question on the Cornell
65 University supplement of the Common Application that asks for the applicant's sexual orientation,
66 using either a blank, fill-in box or a drop-down with the following options:

- 67 • Asexual
- 68 • Bisexual
- 69 • Gay
- 70 • Straight (Heterosexual)
- 71 • Lesbian
- 72 • Pansexual
- 73 • Queer
- 74 • Questioning or unsure
- 75 • Same-gender loving
- 76 • An identity not listed
- 77 • Prefer not to disclose

78
79 Be it further resolved, that an optional question asking whether or not applicants would like to 80 receive information by the LGBT Resource Center be added to the Cornell supplement to 81 simultaneously allow correct self-identification and protect anonymity for queer students who are 82 not out;

83
84 Be it finally resolved, that the optional questions asking for applicants' sexual orientation and/or
85 gender identity on the Cornell supplement to the Common Application will also be present on all
86 other future applications considered for admission into Cornell University from this point forward.

87
88 Respectfully Submitted,
